So-net Entertainment Corporation

Sony Corporation and So-net Entertainment Corporation commence procedures to make So-net Entertainment Corporation a wholly-owned subsidiary of Sony Corporation

Sony Corporation (“Sony”) and So-net Entertainment Corporation (“So-net”) today announced that their respective boards of directors have resolved to proceed towards Sony’s acquisition of all of the outstanding shares of So-net not currently owned by Sony and its subsidiaries through Sony’s tender offer for So-net’s outstanding shares (the “Tender Offer”) and a subsequent share exchange (collectively, the “Transaction”).

In respect of the above-mentioned acquisition, Sony’s board of directors today adopted a resolution to commence the Tender Offer. In addition, So-net’s board of directors today resolved to support the Tender Offer and to recommend that So-net’s shareholders tender their shares in the Tender Offer. If Sony does not acquire all of So-net’s issued shares (excluding the shares of So-net owned by Sony and treasury shares owned by So-net) through the Tender Offer, in order to achieve the goal of making So-net a wholly-owned subsidiary of Sony, Sony and So-net plan to implement a share exchange for So-net’s remaining shares outstanding. For details of the Tender Offer, please refer to Sony’s “Notice Regarding Commencement of Tender Offer for Shares of So-net Entertainment Corporation” and So-net’s “Announcement Concerning Expression of Company’s Opinion for Implementation of Tender Offer for Company’s Shares Made by its Controlling Shareholder, Sony”, both announced today.

As the business environment surrounding the Sony group has changed dramatically and rapidly, Sony has been seeking to strengthen its core areas and allocate resources to growth areas under the new management team. In this regard, network services have become essential to Sony in leveraging its strengths with respect to its hardware and content owned by Sony. So-net has achieved significant success, particularly in the area of network services in Japan, and its rich array of network-related assets, including service management know-how, technologies, talent, extensive user base and content are all aligned with Sony’s strategic direction. At the same time, the capital relationships of Sony, So-net, and M3, Inc. (“M3”), So-net’s main subsidiary, are currently that of parent, its subsidiary, and its indirectly-owned subsidiary, respectively; and with each a listed company, there are limits to the group-wide synergies that can be achieved. Sony believes that, if So-net delists its shares and becomes a wholly-owned subsidiary of Sony, it will be able to fully leverage So-net's business portfolio and assets, while such simplification of the capital relationships will benefit Sony in its efforts to strengthen its core areas and allocate resources to growth areas, which will ultimately lead to realizing more value.

Subsequent to a proposal by Sony to So-net, the two companies have, since March 2012, considered and consulted with each other on various measures with the aim of enhancing the corporate value of both companies. As a result, Sony and So-net have reached the conclusion that it is advisable for the two companies to make So-net a wholly-owned subsidiary of Sony through the Transaction, which they believe will enhance group synergy, with a view to enhancing the corporate value of each of the Sony group and So-net.

After making So-net its wholly-owned subsidiary, Sony plans to maintain the independence of So-net's business operations for a period of time while simultaneously positioning So-net as one of the core components of the Sony group's network services business in Japan and Asia. Sony will further consider how to promote an expansion of Sony's network service platform to Asia outside Japan as well as within Japan. With respect to M3, which engages in the So-net group's marketing support business in the area of medical health care, Sony and So-net will actively consider the possibility of collaborating with M3 in various areas as a member of the Sony group, while simultaneously respecting the initiative and neutrality of M3's management.

Should all So-net shareholders, other than those within the Sony group, tender all of their shares, the aggregate consideration for the acquisition to be paid by Sony will be approximately 60 billion yen. The Transaction is not expected to have any material impact on Sony's consolidated results forecast announced on August 2, 2012, while the Transaction is expected to have a modest accretive effect on net income attributable to Sony's stockholders during the current fiscal year.
